Cowboy

A cowboy's job is to take care of the cows on a ranch. He sees that they have grass to eat and water to drink and keeps them from getting mixed up with other people's cows. He has to watch them all the time.

2. RANCH

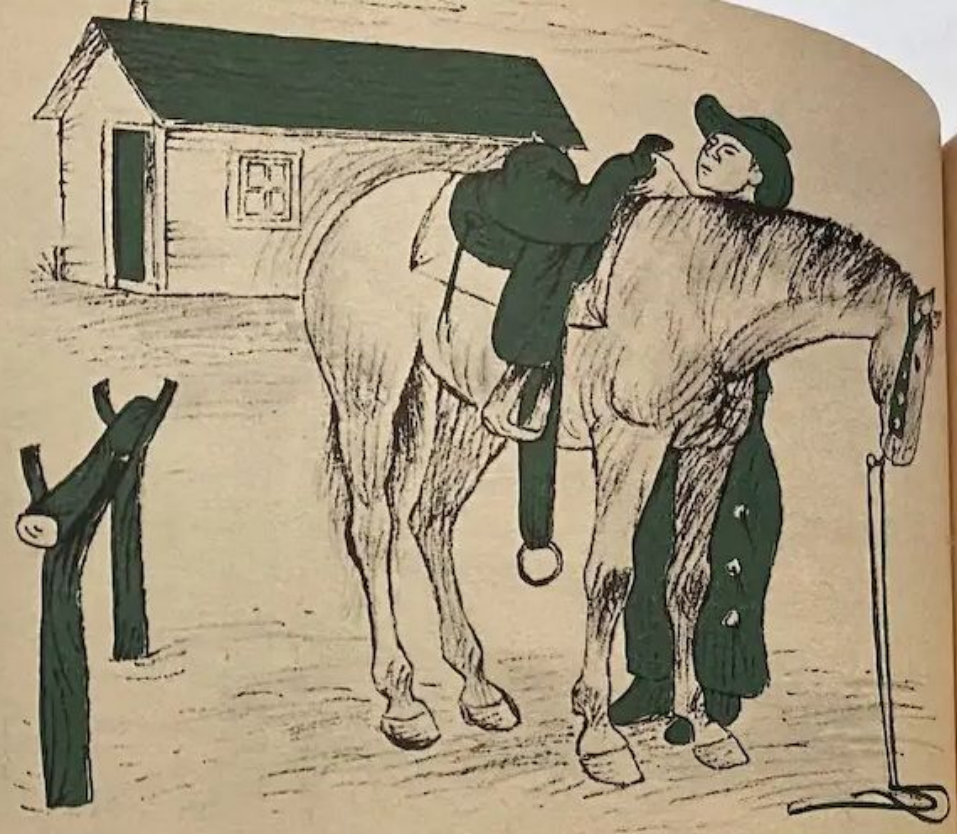
Ranch

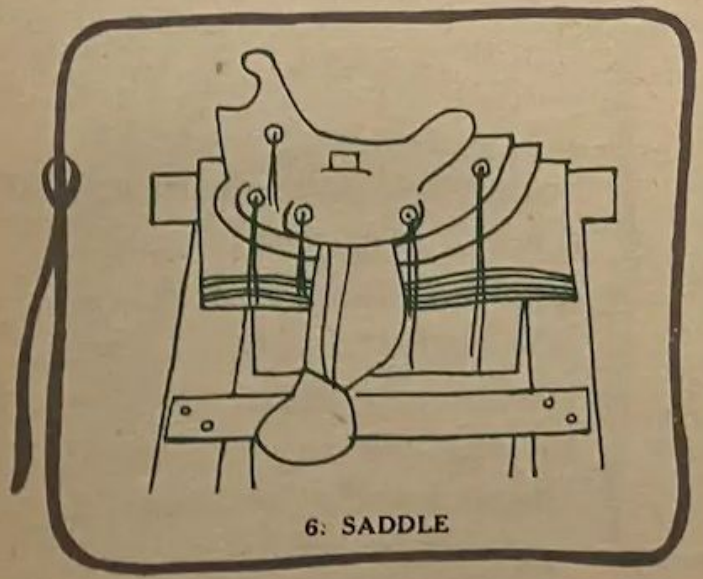
Places where cattle are raised are called ranches. Ranches sometimes cover many miles of grass, trees, and hills. Tall, barbed-wire fences around most ranches keep the cows from going somewhere else.

Bunk House

On large ranches where there are many cowboys, the cowboys sleep in a bunk house. They live there when their work is over for the day. A bunk is a kind of bed or cot and is only big enough for one cowboy.

3. BUNK HOUSE





6. SADDLE

Saddle and Bridle

When a cowboy rides a horse, he sits in a saddle and steers with a bridle. Leather straps hold the bridle on the horse's head. His ears stick up through the bridle. Reins are fastened to a metal bit in the horse's mouth.

Cowboy Hat and Bandana

Wide-brimmed hats keep the sun out of a cowboy's eyes. If he is thirsty, a cowboy can fold the brim into a cup to dip water from the creek. Around his neck he often wears a very big blue or red handkerchief called a bandana.

8. COW

Cow

The cows on a ranch are big and heavy. Ranch cows used to have long horns, but now most of them have short horns or no horns at all. Cows like to be with other cows when they are grazing.

Calf

A calf is a baby cow and it has long legs and big eyes and ears. Calves soon learn to eat grass just as their mothers do, and they are almost grown-up in a year. Calves make good pets.

10. BOOTS

Boots and Spurs

A cowboy likes [illegible] boots, especially if [illegible] are fancy. Boots pro[illegible] a cowboy's feet. Spu[illegible] are little wheels the [illegible] boy straps to his boo[illegible] When a horse feels [illegible] in his sides, he will [illegible] faster. Spurs jingle.

Bumper Gate and Cattle Guard

A bumper gate is a heavy wooden gate in a ranch fence. It hangs easily enough for a car to push it open. A cattle guard is made of steel strips laid over a hole in the ground. The strips are too far apart for cows to walk on.

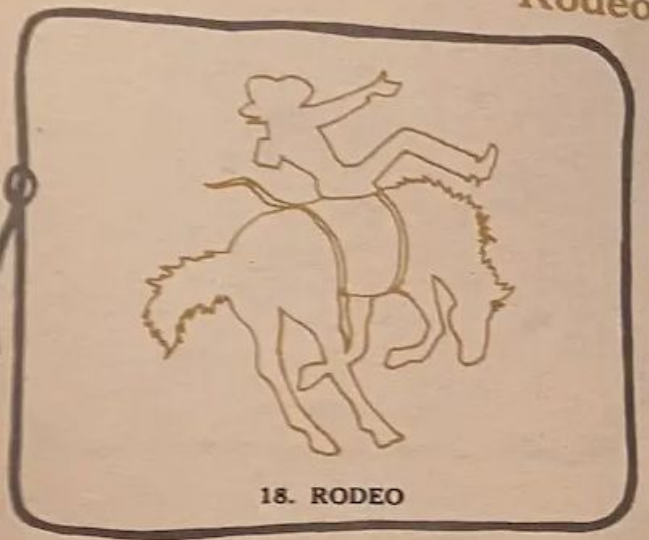
Rodeo



18. RODEO

Sometimes cowboys like to show off what they can do. Then they put on a rodeo. At the rodeo cowboys may ride wild horses, rope calves, twirl ropes, and ride horses standing up. Everyone likes to see a rodeo. Rodeos are fun.
